Contemporary artist Lubna Speitan launches striking series of original monochrome 'nightscapes' that capture the unique aura of London after dark

Lubna Speitan's first solo exhibition showcases her distinctive and instantly recognisable style. Working predominantly in oils and acrylics she paints landscapes, seascapes, portraits and abstracts. Most distinctive, however, are her nightscapes of London

Lubna's ink drawings and nightscape paintings, built from multiple layers of carefully blended paints, shimmer with darkness. She captures the enigmatic uncanniness of nights in the city, nights lit by brittle halogen, icy headlights, reflected street signs, and the sheen of rainwater. The carefully blended range of matt colours create the elusive and reflective tones of the city at night, with subtle variants of greys and whites picking out contemporary landmarks from a deserted train station to the London Eye

These scenes are full of secrets, hinting at the stories that unfold through London's long nights. This is a hidden London: the city of those who live on the streets, the friendless, the outsiders

The paintings reveal the loneliness that looms over London in the dead of night – a loneliness that nevertheless connects us as human beings, and which is tenderly embraced in this work. Inspired by periods of insomnia, Lubna has calmly observed the interplay of darkness and illumination, and invites viewers to share the mystery of these deep and fleeting spaces

We welcome you to attend Lubna's exhibition and celebrate the reflective night scenes of London
